About the Webinar

What does it take to dismantle and rebuild a province-wide victim services system? In this frank and informative session, CARVSS CEO Lauren Reid explores the driving forces, community tensions, and operational realities behind Alberta's transition to regional victim services. She offers firsthand insights from CARVSS's first year — navigating grief, resistance, innovation, and resilience — and invites conversation about what meaningful systems change looks like in victim support.

Featuring

Lauren Reid is a passionate leader with over 15 years in Victim Services, from Edmonton's inner city to rural RCMP detachments. She's held roles from frontline Advocate to Program Manager, Executive Director, and Board Director, with experience overseeing both Victim Services and Restorative Justice programs. With a background in social services, library systems, and Municipal leadership, Lauren brings a unique blend of strategy, empathy, and humour to her work. Now CEO of CARVSS, she's focused on building meaningful programs, fostering strong teams, and ensuring every person impacted by crime or tragedy is met with dignity and compassion.
